NUMBER 4. JANUARY 23, 1909, NORWAY AND SOUTH PARIS, MAINE. VOLUME XXXIV.

THE YEAR OF JUBILEE SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Celebrates Completion of Fifty Years of Organized Christian Work—History of the Church, Sketch of the Departments of Church Work—Life and Services of the Pastor—Sunday's Services—Formal Celebration, Wednesday.

REV. BATES S. RIDEOUT
For Fifteen Years Pastor of the Church.

On account of the rain and consequent bad traveling, Wednesday, there was not as large an audience in the afternoon as was planned for, the church being about half filled. Several from each of the other churches were present and a goodly delegation from South Paris had come over.

The choir—Chester W. Horne, M. Louise Staples, Grace Thayer and Herman L. Horne—sang as a selection "There is a City." The responsive reading was the 22d selection from the Psalms appropriate to the house of God. A solo by Miss Staples entitled "Hand in Hand" was sung. The Scripture read was Matt. 16, beginning with verse 15, and Revelation 2, beginning with verse 7. Prayer was offered by Rev. Caroline E. Angell of the Universalist church, expressing thanksgiving for past history and praying for blessing upon the present work and in the future. Response by the choir "Hear Our Prayer."

Rev. Percival F. Marston of the Pine Street Congregational church, Lewiston, was introduced and gave as his subject "The World's Noises and the Noise of the Gospel."

Every ideal leads men upon the mountain top with God, then down into the valley by way of the cross to lift men up to God. First up to where God lives, then down to where God works. When a man finds truth and with his heart full comes to his fellowmen, his heaviest cross is the indifference caused by selfishness and unbelief. His illustration was Moses bringing the law from Sinai.

There are three jarring notes in human life. First mastery, wherever you find it, you will hear the sound of men struggling for the mastery. He distinguished between mastery and mastership. Mastership is power. It is sublime to see a man master himself. A man sure of himself, of his own soul, is apt to rest in the certainty of God.

The mercenary man works for money only, the artist for love, the mercenary for gain, the artist for love.

Mastery is merely to get the upper hand for advantage and profit. The intense rivalry of modern life, the grasping acts of employer and employee, of purchaser and seller, were cited as instances, also the prevalence of gambling especially in high life. The disposition to

Two Children Frozen.

They Leave Home Saturday Afternoon—Enter a Barn—Remain Through the Night—Found Dead—Cause of Death—Freezing Condition.

The report circulated upon the street Monday morning that two children had been found frozen a short time before occasioned surprise and discussion and all sorts of rumors and reports were current.

As near as discoverable, the facts are these: Vina McKay, aged about twelve years, and Everett McKay, aged ten, children of John McKay, who lives in the F. E. Brown house on Cottage street, just across the town line in Paris, went to a neighbor's upon the hill. Returning, they went down the road leading to Alpine street and came a roundabout way toward home. On nearing the Holmes ice-house, now used by Charles A. Pride as a barn, to get away from the snow which fell quite briskly for a few minutes then, they went into the iced building and remained there through the moderate weather of Saturday night and the bitter freezing cold of Sunday and Sunday night.

The barn door had run off the trucks and was fastened by a brace from the outside reaching about half way up the door, leaving an opening at the top through which they entered but were unable to get out again.

The girl removed her shoes and stockings, which were wet, and her feet had some play, while the boys' shoes also were frozen stiff holding the feet like bars of iron.

Henry Goodwin found them, Monday morning, when he came to feed Mr. Pride's stock, his attention being caught by seeing a black object in the hay. He found the boy in an unconscious state, and in a moment later the girl. Help was obtained and the youngsters taken home.

As the children have often been away, no uneasiness was felt, Saturday night, by the parents. Sunday, the father was away. The mother went out twice to find them during the day and on Mr. McKay's return in the evening considerable search was made here and at South Paris, until a late hour.

The father and mother both work in the shoe factory. There are six children of whom these two are the oldest.

It is not certain yet how serious the injury may be but it is thought by the physicians that the girl will come out all right, but that the boy will probably lose some toes, and perhaps a foot will require amputation.

The children are habitual runaways, and but a few days previously had spent the night in the boiler room of the C. B. Cummings mill, and have often been seen upon the streets at late hours in the evening.

Thursday morning the physician was of the opinion that no amputation at all would be necessary.

Peoples' Course.

Next Wednesday evening, at the Norway Opera House, Hon. G. A. Gearhart delivers his lecture, "The Footprints of the Centuries." Gearhart is known all over the country as a favorite on the lecture platform. "Both himself and his lectures are a perfect inspiration toward ideal manhood," says Rev. James R. Ph. D., of Boston, Mass. North, South, East and West, newspapers and individuals unite in praising Mr. Gearhart and his lectures.

There will be a large audience, Wednesday night, and the speaker will attract the interest and enthusiasm of all. Doors open at 7.30. Lecture begins promptly at 8.

Ed Dyer has gone to work in Boston. Mrs. William Lewis is on the sick list. Austin Moore is laid up with ulcers on his feet.

Mrs. Horace H. Cole is sick with a severe cold.

Isaac Fox is confined to the house by rheumatism.

Clara Daggett came to Norway from Oxford, Tuesday.

Helen Staples of Hanover is visiting Mrs. C. B. Cummings.

Watch and clock maker Turner of Hebron is in town this week.

Guy Walker, son of Dr. E. C. Walker, is working in the painting shop of G. H. Bennett.

Milo Currier is home from Auburn, where he has been employed in a shoe factory.

J. H. Dyer of Portland has been here this week on business connected with the H. P. Webb Co. corn packing factory.

Fred Morgan has finished work at Mechanic Falls and returned to Norway. He is talking of going to Havrhill, Mass.

Fred M. Davis was up from Mechanic Falls, Monday night. He says business is starting brisk in his new painting shop there.

Anyone having bills against the town of Norway are requested to bring them to the selectmen's office at once. The municipal year closes, Jan. 31.

Collector Geo. A. Cole gets interest on 1908 taxes now as they began to draw interest, Jan. 1 of the present year. A word to the economical is sufficient.

S. C. Foster has set a boiler in the basement of his barber shop, and connected it with the radiators in the shop. He will thus secure his steam heat independently.

The Veranda club association will give a supper and entertainment at G. A. R. hall, Friday evening, Feb. 13. A very good supper will be served, and a program of entertainment is being arranged.

The engine at the Oxford Light Company's power house was started, Tuesday afternoon, and the electricity is now generated largely by steam. It takes six cords of wood daily and is almost a constant job for one man to put the wood in the fire room and another to feed the furnaces.

The close buyer will find many bargains in our stores of desirable goods left over from the earlier season's trade that have been marked down to close out and to make room for other goods when the time shall come for them. There are now many weeks before spring, and our merchants make these reductions when the people want the goods, so they may carry over no article of old stock.

The Spanish War Veterans.

The annual meeting of Frank T. Bartlett command, No. 130, S. W. V., was held at the armory of D Company, Tuesday evening. The reports of the quartermaster and the adjutant showed the affairs of the command to be in excellent shape. Much enthusiasm was manifested and it is the hope of the comrades to largely increase the membership the ensuing year. Past Commander Bradbury installed the following officers elected at the preceding meeting:

Capt.—John W. Nash.
1st Lieut.—Albert J. Stearns.
2d Lieut.—Ralph J. Trevel.
Adj.—Morton L. Kimball.
Q. M.—R. Denison Cole.
Chap.—Wm. W. Shuen.
S. G.—Sanger S. Maxim.

Early in February the command will hold a social and banquet for members and veterans of the Spanish War living hereabouts, not as yet members of the command.

Uniform Rank K. of P.

At the meeting of A. O. U. E. No. 5, U. R. K. of P., the following were elected officers for the next year:

Capt.—Merton L. Kimball.
1st Lieut.—O. L. Bowker.
2d Lieut.—H. Denison Cole.
Recorder—Albert L. Sanborn.
Treas.—Ferdinand F. Swan.

"I thought I'd get along without the ADVERTISER this year" writes a subscriber, "but somehow I feel lost without its weekly visits so enclosed is $1.50 and send it to me until I order it stopped or lose my credit in your office."

Brook R. Cross, who has been employed in the New England Telephone office for several months, went to Rockland, Wednesday, which place is his home. He has finished work for the telephone company for the present.

George D. Swift and Hiram Wildes are putting up a hen house for Louis I. Gilbert. It is to be 12x40 feet, contain five pens and is to be arranged with good light, excellent ventilation, after the most approved style of this kind of buildings.

18, 20, 24, 26, 32 and 34 below zero were the readings of thermometers, Tuesday morning. This last figure is believed to surpass the record for quite a number of years, and was reached at several points in this vicinity. The morning was still and the cold was felt less than upon some other mornings.

P. J. Byrne of the Boot & Shoe Makers Union of Lynn was in town, Tuesday, in quest of cutters to take the strikers' places in that city. He found all the shoe cutters here busy and none expressed a desire to go to Lynn to face a howling mob and be escorted to and from the factory under police protection.

The rain of Wednesday made the traveling decidedly sloppy. Rubber boots and tight ones were the only kind of footwear to insure dry feet. We have had all kinds of weather of late, and if everyone is not satisfied with some one kind of it the weather man might as well go out of the business of trying to please.

Mason M. Kilgore has sold his farm, the T. J. Whitehead place, to Wm. N. Judkins of South Boston. The price named is $1500. Mr. Judkins intends by and by to turn farmer and settle down on the place. At present he is a motorman on the Boston Elevated Railway Co. He has a good job and likes but prefers farming to railroading. Mr. Kilgore will move down to the village. Mr. Judkins returned to the city Wednesday afternoon.

Capt. J. Waldo Nash was in Portland last week, not to attend the Spanish war veterans' meeting, as was announced, but to make arrangements with those who are to make exhibits at the New York Sportsmen's Show. Capt. Nash has been selected to handle the Maine railroad and hotel exhibit at that show, and he was in Portland to meet the representatives of the railroads and hotel men. Capt. Nash will have full charge of all the Maine exhibits at that show.

IF YOU HAVE PAIN IN YOUR BACK

Do Not Be Deceived. You Have Kidney Trouble, and You Do Not Need a Physician to Tell You So.

Let us give you a piece of advice: Pain in the back is an almost infallible sign of kidney disease; a sure sign is the condition of your urine. If you have a pain in the back then look to the condition of your urine. It is easily done. Take a glass tumbler and fill it with urine, after it has stood 24 hours; if it has a sediment, if it is milky or cloudy, if it is pale or discolored, stringy orropy, your kidneys and bladder are in a dangerous condition and need immediate attention, or the consequences may prove fatal.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the one medicine that really cures all diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, and it will take you a short trial to convince yourself of its wonderful curative power.

G. F. Samner of 409 Tiooga street, Syracuse, N. Y., in a recent letter says: "I was afflicted for years with severe pains in my back and kidneys. I tried many doctors and many medicines, but got no relief; for over two years I scarcely had a good night's rest on account of backache in a most distressing form. I bought a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and commenced to use it, and I must say I never imagined I should find such a wonderful cure. Why I feel like a young man again in spite of my 50 years."

All druggists sell Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy in the New 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles.

Sonnet: The Everlasting "Why?"

Life on one brow bestows fame's laurel crown, For fortune favors some from very birth. Another forehead, in its grief and death, Beneath a martyr's thorn is bending down. We strive for things we have no power to move. Of names that "while we live, seem greatly worth"— Then at the end, within the common earth, All rest side by side, the king and clown. We meet and learn to know life's greatest gain Of love that is as heaven is high. And then God bids us part—our meeting vain, And at His will our hearts we crucify. Realizing in our language and our pain, That only God can answer that great "Why?" New Haven, Ct. L. LAVINIA VERRILL.

When Sleep is Best.

Oh Mother Earth, dear Mother Earth, Shalt soothe us all at Eventide, And hush our every sigh Until the children of thy play, Asleep we lie.

Dear Mother, at thy rugged breast, We've straitened and we've galled at will, We've striven to get our fill, And now we lie at rest in the west, The air flows chill.

Wipe thou our greedy foaming lips That never were satisfied, Of the milk that thou hast drips, And darker stains beside, Of all uncleanliness must they be purified.

It's bed-time, how eagerly And childishly we yearn And plead to stay up longer, With weary eyes that glare, And heavy, sleepy, drooping heads, As sleep we vainly spare.

The gaudy toys of day Strip thou from off our breast, And folded smooth lay them away— Our night clothes are the best, Our weary limbs must cease from play. "This time to rest."

Then fold us in thy cozy embrace, Clasp close us to thy breast, Each drowsy, sleep-stained face, And sing us into rest, Be thy lullaby our resting place. When sleep is best. CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

Life's Seasons.

When the hours are passing slowly, Of life's presence round me, I feel a presence round me, Presence of the Gods sublime.

"That brings gladness to the heart; 'Tis the past and not the future, Its glow is mine and mine apart. We recall the days of childhood; We recall the days of youth; We recall the hours of pleasure, And live the life of truth, Ere the bitter piercing tempests Of affliction stung the soul; Ere the bow of war's grim archer Shot an arrow to his goal.

Then our lives were like the springtime, Flowers and gladness everywhere, Liriched with the song of sunbeams Chased away our every care. Then the heat of summer's passion Burned its lurid flame on high, Till the last rays of its glory Lit the evening's crimson sky. Then doth autumn's icy fingers Touch the brow and hair once fair, And the mist and gathering darkness Binds the soul in deep despair. But the fiercest blasts of winter Cannot cause the soul to die, It shall wake like the springtime To its glorious life on high.

There no suffering can afflict us, All our sorrows will be past, Though we live through changeful seasons, We shall dwell with God at last. GREENWOOD, ME. RAYNE L. FERRICK.

Times That Have Gone.

We may utter a sigh as we pass the site of the old schoolhouse; we may drop a tear among the ruins of the old barn where we watched the swallows and the sheep; we may halt at the old pasture bars and think of the boy who drove the cows in and out there, fifty years ago, and shudder to think that the changes which have swept away so many of our associates of that time are pointed directly toward us and that our time is coming with the rest, but none of these feelings or experiences are peculiar to us; we are only taking our turn.

"The thoughts we are thinking our fathers did think; From youth we are shrinking our fathers did shrink; To the life we are clinging our fathers did cling. But it speeds from us all like a bird on the wing."

Old Fashioned Warning. "Talk of modern luxuries!" exclaimed an old bachelor. "I, for one, do not think we are half so comfortable as we used to be in the old days, when every thing was thought of by the hostess. Now things are taken for granted or left to the servants, and consequently the most obvious necessities are often forgotten in the very greatest homes."

"As for country house parties in zero weather, they make me shiver to think of them; and speaking of shivering by the way I wonder why those most delightful copper warming pans with which our grandmothers used to heat up their beds were ever discontinued. I was at an auction sale of old furniture some time ago and saw one of those old time comforts. I bid it for a couple of dollars, and had my man polish it up and varnish the handle. I only intended to keep it as a sort of curiosity for my den, but Mrs. A., who was taking time to write me, took a fancy to it, and I gave it to her."

"A few weeks afterward I spent Sunday with her (rather unwillingly I confess, for, as I said, I dread a country house in cold weather) and I retired at night longing for my own comfortable quarters in town. By the way, the most delightful slumbers and dreams I was my grandfather."

"Why, it was your warning pan!" said Mrs. A. the next morning at the breakfast table when I described my sensations. "I resolved that you should have a regular old time bed, so I scented some of your warm water in the house, and put some live coals in the warming pan and run it between the sheets up and down until the whole bed was thoroughly warmed for your reception. Now that it has been such a success I will have it used constantly."

Every one who has experienced the discomfort of getting in between ice cold linen sheets in winter. For old people especially such a shock must necessarily be injurious, as they have not the vitality to impart immediate warmth to their coverings, and it seems odd that such a simple contrivance as the warming pan should have gone completely out of existence.

The Life That Was. So my parents set up their simple housekeeping, and passed, I have no doubt, their happiest days—days of happy, very happy, as any of their children or numerous grandchildren or great grandchildren have enjoyed in the stress of a more complex civilization. She sang at her work; his ax resounded in the forest. He made a clearing and planted corn and beans and potatoes among the stumps. Their first child was born in that hut. The clearing grew, and before long a large well-built house replaced the primitive cabin. This more substantial house had one large room on the ground floor, about 20 ft. square, a low-roofed chamber to which access was had by a ladder, and in the course of time a "linter" (lean-to) addition. The "linter" was framed, but the main part was built of logs. These were hewn on the inside, and the cracks between them filled with a plaster made of clay.

The filling was liable to crack, and it was necessary to patch the broken places every fall. This was called "chinking up the house," and it made a happy time for the older folks. (It had not yet appeared on the scene), there being always some of the moist clay left over which they could use in making cups and saucers for their play-houses and other ornaments. The floor was of dressed chestnut planks, the beautiful grain of which was kept scrupulously clean and smoothly polished. At one end of the room was a huge stone fireplace, with great iron andirons and iron shovel and tongs in the corners. In the "linter" were the spare bed with its white counterpane, a tall brass-handled bureau, and our father's large oak chest, with its complicated lids, always a marvel to the younger children, who would run and peep wonderingly whenever he went to open it.

After the evening chores were done, my father would appear in the doorway with the big back-log coated with snow, often of ampler girth than himself, and fully breast-high to him as he held it upright, canting it one way and another, and walking it before him on its wedged-shaped end. He would perhaps stand it against the chimney while he took a breathing spell and planned his campaign. Then, the andirons heaved forward on the hearth, and the bed of half-burnt brands and live coals raked open, the log log was walked into the chimney, where a skilful turn would lay it over, hissing and steaming, in its lair of hot embers.

It seemed a thing alive, and its vehement sputtering and protesting made a dramatic moment for at least one small spectator. The stout shovel and tongs, or perhaps a piece of firewood used as a lever, would force it against the chimney-back; then a good-sized stick called a "back-stick" was laid on the top of it, and the andirons were set in place. Across the andirons another good-sized stick was laid, called a "fore-stick," and in the interspace smaller sticks were crossed and thrust and piled, all quickly kindled by the live coals and brands. In very cold weather a fire was kept burning all night, our father getting up once or twice to replenish it. Even in summer the coals rarely became extinct. A good heap of them, covered with embers at bedtime, would be found alive when raked open in the morning.

Hard Colds. People whose blood is pure are not nearly so likely to take hard colds as are others. Physiology goes into the reason. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood pure, causing healthy action of the mucous membrane and giving strength and tone to all the organs and functions.

This great medicine recovers the system after a cold, as no other does.

The Local Newspaper. State Superintendent Stetson says:—Current reading occupies a large proportion of the average reader's time, perhaps too large a proportion. The local newspaper has a just claim to be called an educational institution. It makes a record of local and current history, fosters and promotes enterprises which seek to improve the general welfare and renders an amount of unremunerated public service not equalled and not even approached by any other agency, and it has proved itself the common school's most loyal ally. For these and many other reasons, the teacher should be a reader of her local paper.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. ANNUAL REPORT VERIFIED. Union Mutual Life Examined by the Insurance Department of Iowa—Everything Found Exactly in Accordance With the Statements.

A few weeks ago the Auditor of the State of Iowa, Hon. Frank F. Merriam, as his official examiner, Mr. M. Beebe, visited the home office of the Union Mutual Life Insurance company, at Portland, for the purpose of verifying its annual report, in pursuance of the practice of the insurance department of Iowa to inspect the accounts of a few companies every year.

The report of their findings, which has recently come to hand, indicates that the various items checked out exactly as listed, that the bonds and stocks owned were seen, that many of the mortgage loan papers were inspected, and that in all respects the accounts were entirely correct. The actuarial department is especially complimented, and the official staff and clerical force are thanked for assistance rendered. Their report concludes with this commendatory sentence: "The company is in excellent financial condition, and is entitled to a more liberal patronage on the part of Iowa citizens."

This is interesting information for the many Union Mutual policy holders in this locality, though it is but confirmatory of the generally understood facts regarding this well known home company.

BETHEL.

Terribly Mangled.

J. L. O'Meara, head brakeman on a through freight train from Island Pond to Portland, was killed in the Grand Trunk yard at Bethel at about 8 o'clock Monday night. Another train was waiting. Some of the crew of the waiting train were walking up the track after the other train had passed and accidentally stumbled upon the body of O'Meara. The body was terribly mangled, both legs being severed at the hips and the abdomen being torn badly. Across the forehead was a broad break and the skull was crushed.

One leg was not found Monday night. The body was evidently dragged some distance as its course could be traced by blood and scattered fragments of clothing, etc. Coroner A. W. Grover was at once notified and also County Attorney E. C. Park of Bethel, and both were up on the scene in a short time. The body was taken to the undertaking room. O'Meara was only 20 years of age and unmarried, it is said.

Another account: The East-bound freight train "No. 92," which passed at about 15 miles an hour, when from some cause unknown brakeman John O'Meara fell from the tender and the whole train passed over his body, mangleing it in a horrible shape, severing all the limbs from the trunk and crushing the limbs into an almost unrecognizable mass. The body was rolled from near the overhead bridge about 250 yards, while the train was passing over it. No one saw the accident, and the train kept on its course till half way to Locke's Mills, when the fireman discovered O'Meara's cap and lantern at the back end of the tender where he was known to have gone to give the passing signals to the rear brakeman. At Bryant's Pond they received a telegram from Bethel that O'Meara's body had been discovered, as above stated. O'Meara leaves a father, brother and sisters in St. Bridge's Falls, Canada. He braked here last winter, and had recently gone on again for this winter.

Coroner Albert W. Grover was immediately summoned, also county attorney Park, and the following jurors immediately impaneled: Ira C. Jordan, H. H. Canaan, Fred I. Clark, John P. Coburn, H. B. Chapman, Dana C. Philbrook, Chas. I. Abbott, jr. At the inquest, Tuesday, at 1 p. m., the verdict rendered was that "John O'Meara was killed by falling beneath the cars from some cause unknown to the jury." The prevailing opinion of the jurors and all who looked over the ground was that O'Meara was knocked from the tender by being struck in the head by the overhead bridge. The first signs of the accident were seen on the rails about 20 yards east of the bridge.

An uncle and cousin of the deceased arrived Tuesday morning, and took the remains on the evening train to Canada for burial.

This is the fifth victim by the bridge since the road was built, and it seems high time that the railroad and town authorities should work together and do away with such a death trap.

The employees of the train from which John L. O'Meara was killed Monday night, were at the inquest on Tuesday, and were as follows: Geo. H. Bryant, conductor; Leland W. Philbrook, engineer; Herbert D. Woodward, fireman; J. H. Nugent, brakeman.

He was a member of F. and A. M., of I. O. O. F., and of H. H. His funeral, which occurred at his late home, at 11 a. m., Sunday, Jan. 11, was very largely attended, showing the high esteem in which he was held. Members of Union Grange and West Paris I. O. O. F. attended in a body. Rev. E. P. Turner officiated. The Odd Fellows read their beautiful service over the remains and acted as escort to the grave. There were many flowers.

The Year of Jubilee.

In the evening the exercises commenced with a voluntary, then "Unfold, Ye Portals of God's Redemption," was sung by members of Norway Festival chorus: C. W. Horne, James Dunn, tenors; Mrs. Louise Staples, Mrs. Edwin S. Cummings, Clara Gammon, Carrie Tucker, sopranos; Grace Thayer, Mrs. Hiram Wildes, Isabel Woodbury, altos; H. L. Horne, the Plummer, basses.

Rev. W. E. Brooks, D. D., read from Matt 16:15 and 1 Tim. 3:14 and offered prayer of thanksgiving for a church full of love and holy purpose, prayed for enlargement of our vision, and for the power of God to rest on the church.

The quartet sang an arrangement of "Rock of Ages."

The pastor then gave the historical address. Some very interesting facts of the early days were cited. Substantially these facts and figures are published on page 3 of this issue of the Advertiser.

He gave brief sketches of the pastors and those men and women who have worked for the church. 426 have joined the church in the 50 years. The church is free from factions.

A solo, "Hear not ye, O Israel," was sung by Miss Staples, most beautifully and feelingly.

Rev. Smith Baker, D. D., of Williston church, Portland, was the speaker of the evening. His theme was "What does the Church Stand for?" Value of everything is in what it represents. This is true of material, books, organizations, institutions and men. The meeting house stands for ideas. First for instruction. Congregationalism stands for an educated ministry and an intelligent laity. The necessity of a democracy is the high average intelligence of all its members. So of any church congregational in form.

Three-fourths of the religious instruction must be gained in the church. Intelligence is necessary for maintenance of the Christian faith. There can be no strong and earnest life without an intelligent conception of the nature and destiny of the human soul.

Second, a religious home. The gospel is the message from the heart of God to the heart of man. It enters into a man's heart as nothing else does or can. The value of the home is the love that is in it. There are times when nothing but the deepness of God will satisfy the human soul. Man with strugglings and deep needs should find in the church sympathy and love. Speak to the man you don't know. It is etiquette always.

Third, it stands for the development of character and gifts. The strength of the nation depends upon the development of the ability of the individual. This has been the glory of the Christian Endeavor society. Set the young at work. Give yourself to the church, if you expect the church to give you anything.

Fourth, worship. These churches stand for the highest aspirations of the human soul. We need to shut out all from a man's soul except himself and God. You will value the church for the sacrifices you make for it. It is the foretaste of the heavenly peace and the gateway to glory.

"Blest be the Tie that Binds" was sung by the congregation, and benediction was pronounced by Dr. Baker.

The anniversary offerings collected in the little bags aggregated $144 according to the count on Thursday morning. A few that have not been sent in may bring the amount closely to $150.

Pickering Through the Ice.

A Winter Sport that Has Many Followers.—The Kind of Clothes to Wear, Bait to be Used, and Where the Fish are Found—Their Habits.

The difference between the pickerel and certain detective agencies is that while they occasionally sleep, it never does. At least, it has never been caught at it, and there is no hour of the day or night, or any day of the year, when it cannot be taken with the proper bait and patience.

In the chill months, when the lakes have a roofing of ice a foot thick, with 12 inches of snow on top of that, other fish go into retirement. Either they become dormant like the bass, as some authorities say, or they go into the deepest unfrozen holes and refuse to be comforted. They will not take any lure, and reappear to human gaze only when spring has warmed the waters. The bass, the trout and the muskallonge all do this, but the pickerel is swimming around, looking for something to eat, long after the others have hibernated.

Fishing through the ice for pickerel is a sport extensively practiced hereabouts, on the surface of North and Bird ponds—so extensively, in fact, that the State has passed laws regulating the time and places where the fish may be taken through the ice. The number of holes a man may cut in the ice is also regulated by statute, as well as how many lines he may use and during what hours he may fish.

The taking of pickerel in the months of December, January, February, March and even in April, if the spring be late, is simple enough, but lots of fun. The angler should be thoroughly clothed from head to the heels and on his feet should wear three pairs of heavy woolen stockings at least three sizes too large for him, and rubber shoes lacing half way up his calf. With this kind of foot-covering he may stand on the ice for hours without ill effects or discomfort.

If he knows the deepest part of the lake he goes to it with an ax and chops five or six holes 18 inches square and 10 yards apart. Through these he drops his lines, each bearing a big hook and sinker and a live minnow. In the warm months the pickerel is occasionally a choice feeder, disdaining anything less tempting than a piece of fresh meat, or a silver-sided chub, alive, active and juicy, but in winter it is hungry and willing to forego that with anything it can digest.

The best bait then is chicken entrails, or a part of chicken breast, or a similar portion of the bird. Probably the smallest of fishes upon which it is accustomed to dine in prosperous days are in places where it cannot reach them, and, like the hobo who in summer is autocratic and in winter is democratic, it is willing to compromise. The manner in which the pickerel takes the bait, too, is evidence of the trait to which it is brought. In July and August it trifles with the live minnow, taking hold of it gingerly, running with it a little way, then dropping it to return to it, playing with it as a cat with a mouse.

Minnows are plentiful and the pickerel does not much care whether it obtains the particular minnow or not. The best pickerel fishermen do not think of making the jerk for a full minute after the line begins to move through the water. But in winter the pickerel wants the meat, sees it, smells it when within a foot, and gulps it down whole, taking no chances. Immediately, the big hook pricks, and as it starts away it gives a dash of a yard, securely hooks itself, and thereafter makes such play as it can.

The line is fastened to a big stake driven into the ice, and the angler, shuffling from hole to hole, slapping himself to keep warm and occasionally taking an observation of the sun through the bottom of a bottle, darkly, sees the agitation and joins in.

The pickerel is normally a big fish. In some of the lakes it gets up to 80 pounds weight. It is not so game as the muskallonge, but it has strength, and one of the tribe weighing 15 pounds in winter water will make a great struggle.

There is, of course, no opportunity for reel and rod work. The angler hangs on with both hands and hauls in as he gets the chance. Sometimes the hook holds and sometimes it doesn't. The line may be frayed through against the edge of the ice-hole before the fight ends. When near the surface, the fish may leap against the side of the hole and knock himself off. The fact that the man can obtain no sure foothold, and slips and slides about, being as anxious to keep out of the water as to get the pickerel out, works against him.

Altogether he has a time that he will remember. Pickerel will bite almost any winter day, if, of their lurking places can be found, and there are worse ways of putting in an idle afternoon, though there is a good deal of work about it, as well as a good deal of exposure. O. W. B.

The Biography of a Bootblack.

Typical of Thousands of Cases.

In a story taken from the New York Independent of a young Italian, here give extracts which to the writer are very interesting.

Until eight years of age he lived in a large house with many other boys, was well cared for and taught to read and work. At that time an old man came claiming to be his grandfather and wept over him, producing papers to corroborate his statement and claiming wealth and a fine house.

The boy was allowed to go with the old man to Naples. On arriving there his palace was a dark cellar with four boys larger than himself who the old man said were his brothers. They used to beat him unmercifully. They were made to beg and steal which was so different from his early teaching that it was hard. The old man told him if he did not want to steal, he could be a cripple and beg. He heard the old man negotiating to make him a cripple, and when he and Francesco came along the next morning (having been there three years) they ran away, going into the country finding employment with a fisherman. A few years they were well treated and well fed.

They had heard of the easily-obtainable wealth in America. A young man well-dressed, came along, taking gold out of his pocket, telling them that he got it in America, and asked them if they would not like to go. They thought they would, and he got them a place on a steamer. They were put below to shovel coal when they were very sick and thought they should die.

After landing on an island in New York, they were told by the bosses that they would have to go back, because of a lack of money, but an Italian, Bartolo, claimed he was an uncle of theirs, while two other Italians swore to having known them in Italy as being Bartolo's

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was fitful, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—Mrs. M. E. HUGHSON, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks Produce Displacements. Apparently trifling incidents in woman's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started. The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become neglected, or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. Leiah Stowell, 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—You are indeed a godsend to women, and if they all knew what you could do for them, there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony. "I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, womb trouble, nervousness, and excruciating headache, but a few bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy, and I do not know what sickness is, and I now enjoy the best of health."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system. Its record of cures is the greatest in the world, and should be relied upon with confidence.

nephews. They were allowed to stop.

They worked for Bartolo for some time, he fleeing them of all their earnings. Learning of better ways, they found employment where they saved some money, then, taking up boot-black-ing. Rocco Corrocco, who relates their adventures, had saved $700. Francisco had saved $900. They thought when they got $1,000, they would go back to Italy and buy a farm, but since they were doing so well they thought they would stay.

He says "At first we did not know much about this country but by and by we learned. There are a plenty of Protestants, who are heretics, but they have a religion too. Many of the finest churches are Protestant, but they have no saints and no altars, which seems strange. These people are without a king as in Italy. It is what they call a republic, as Garibaldi wanted, and every year the people vote. They wanted us to vote last fall but we did not. A man came and said he would give us five dollars and fifty cents, then we could get two dollars for our vote. I went with five men to court and when they asked me how long I had been in the country, I told them two years. Afterward my countrymen said I was a fool and would never learn politics. They said the Democrats are for a king, and then we would swear to it, was what they told me.

"There are two kinds of people who vote here, Republicans and Democrats. I went to a Republican meeting and the man said that Republicans wanted a republic and the Democrats are against it. Garibaldi didn't want a king and he was the greatest man that ever lived."

He thinks that Francisco likes the girl that he met at a picnic, and Rocco seems to retain a warm spot for the daughter of the fisherman who befriended him.

The Savings Bank Tax.

Governor Hill and Bank Examiner Timberlake are right. The tax on the savings banks should be reduced a quarter of a cent. The State now appropriates a fifth part of the net earnings of the banks—Mr. Timberlake says nearly one-fourth—which is too much. There was some excuse for this a few years ago when the State was hard up, but now it is in such a comfortable financial situation that it can afford to cut down the bank tax and let the depositor get the benefit.

Fidgets.

Has it ever occurred to your mind to notice how few people of your acquaintance can keep still? Probably not one in twenty can keep perfectly quiet even for a few moments. As a people we are restless, and I fear that we are rapidly growing more so. I plead guilty to my share of this fidgeting, although I can keep still occasionally, if required. But it is surprising to notice some individuals.

My attention has been called to this nervousness of which I speak, more particularly of late. Why, it is really distressing, as well as ludicrous, to notice the different movements some very good people will make in a very short space of time. The wonder is that they live so long as they do. For instance, if talking with you, it seems impossible for one of these "fidgeters" to sit still, look you squarely in the face, and talk without going through certain gestures peculiar to themselves. Perhaps it may be a motion of the head, a fumbling of the watch-chain, or some part of the clothing; chewing something, either tobacco, gum, a toothpick, or anything at hand finds its way to the mouth; or it may be a way of keeping one's chair in motion, swaying back and forth, or rising to run to the door or window and looking out, as if expecting somebody or something.

When one is troubled with "fidgets," the room is too hot or too cold always, and some other position is the most desirable. In conversation such people are very poor listeners. They can't spend time to listen to any one. They want to do all the talking themselves, or if not talking, they generally have an absent or indifferent air about them, as if the ideas of others had no power to interest them, and consequently of no account.

Not long ago I happened to be in the presence of a very nervous gentleman. He did his best to be entertaining, and is quite well informed, but, alas, he is an inveterate user of the weed and during an hour's time arose and spit in the fire forty-seven times. This is no exaggeration. The habit has such a fast hold on him that he has no realization of his condition, or how it seems to an observer.

We all have some habits that make us less desirable companions to our fellow-beings. Let us strive to rid ourselves of that wearisome complaint, which I will call "fidgets," because I know of no other name for it. Yours sincerely, East Stoneham, Jan. 18, 1903. F. E. S.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE.

Who Is Educated?

What Is Education?

General, Not Special, Knowledge.

MR. EDITOR:—I see by a recent edition of the ADVERTISER a request for the opinions of some of your readers in regard to Education and Who are Educated.

I will therefore venture to advance a few opinions of my own, which you are at liberty to print or consign to the waste-basket, whichever course you, in the exercise of your own good judgment, may deem best.

It seems to us, after a careful consideration of all the definitions of Education, that every one except the idiot is, in a certain sense, educated. When the child learns something which it did not know before, its education has begun, and it is never ended until he sleeps his last sleep.

The expression, "He has finished his education," is utterly erroneous, while life and reason last.

There are different degrees of education, and we sometimes hear of practical and theoretical education, the principal difference being in the individual, one employing his education in his everyday life, the other keeping his (as he does his dress suit) stored away, to be used only on special occasions.

The tendency of everything, for several years, has been toward specialism (if one may be allowed to use that term), and hence every lawyer, clergyman and physician has become a specialist, becoming almost perfect in his own particular vocation, and knowing almost nothing outside that vocation. The same is true of the artisan and mechanic; he learns to do one thing perfectly, but outside that he knows practically nothing, and cares less. No doubt, such an individual is worth more to his employer in one sense; but to the body politic, is he so valuable a citizen as he would be, had he more general and less special education?

We have said that the specialist laborer is probably worth more to his employer than he of a more general education, but even this, in the long run, is questionable. Take for example the workmen in a large shoe factory; each man is a specialist; after a time the workmen in a certain department, we will say the lasters, become dissatisfied and call for more pay. We will suppose the manufacturer is paying all he can afford to under existing circumstances. It will be useless, however, for him to tell them so, or to attempt to convince by statistics, for they are as ignorant in regard to the cost of manufacturing a pair of shoes as though they had never seen the inside of a shoe factory. They know everything pertaining to their own branch of labor, and absolutely nothing regarding any other. Were these men more generally educated, they might be more amenable to reason.

Another tendency of special education is to draw the attention of the general public away from what is going on in the councils of the nation. We elect men to our State, national and municipal offices on election day without considering for one moment their fitness for those offices, and we never think of them again; we are too busy with our special education.

The result of all this is that the business of governing the country is left entirely to the wily and crafty politicians, until we are just waking up to the fact that everything has been concentrated into the hands of a few grasping, soulless individuals, and that the other inhabitants of this great and glorious country can pay the prices of these worse than robbers, or freeze and starve, as the case may be.

What is the remedy? We claim that more general and less special education would help the situation.

Study the science of government, teach it in the public schools, form clubs all over the country and study the great problems confronting society to-day; debate them, write on them, study them from every point of view; and in this way, and this only, will their solution be found.

Let the doctor, the lawyer, the farmer, the merchant, the artisan, all of them, lay aside their special vocations occasionally, and assemble to talk over these things, and in our opinion you will soon see a better state of affairs.

We think, Mr. Editor, that we have written quite enough for a starter, and we invite criticism and the opinions of others. Speak up! Don't be afraid! And let us see if we can't get up a little interest in these questions. It is to educate our sons and daughters that we must look for the salvation of the country.

Hoping to hear from others on this subject, I remain, as ever, the friend and well wisher of all earnest seekers for truth.

Laugh and the World Seems Right.

Not Covered by the Statute.

This story is told of the judge of a municipal court:—

There was a farm house a little outside the village whose inmates had a very unsavory reputation and it came about that the head of the house was complained of for keeping a nuisance and brought into court. He confessed in the course of the examination that he had made a wine but he drank by himself and guests to excess.

"A wine made from rhubarb," said the judge thoughtfully, "I find nothing in the statutes to cover that. The definition of wine is that it is the expressed juice of fruit. Rhubarb is not a fruit. You may go."

A Doubtful Financier.

"One time," said the narrator, "we had a young man in our employ. The benzene can needed to be refilled, so we handed him the pint can and fifty cents in change and told him to go to the store and get it filled. He returned with the benzene. 'How much did you have to pay?' we asked."

"Why, I gave them the money you gave me," came the astonishing reply.

Following the Fashions.

An old lady who lived in West Virginia, went to a store to purchase a few articles. She, being rather inquisitive and ignorant, saw a pair of hand painted and bows hanging on a post and asked what it was. The clerk guessing she did not know the use of it told her it was a new fashioned fan just received from the East. She was delighted and bought it immediately and returned to her home.

A religious meeting was to be held the following Sunday at the schoolhouse two miles from her home and she made up her mind to go and take her fan. The people had gathered and the minister was reading the first hymn when the old lady came in and took the front seat.

The services proceeded as usual and the minister was well on in his sermon when feeling a little warm she began to make use of her fan. The people nearby looked surprised and nudged each other, and giggles were heard from various parts of the room.

At first the minister looked over his spectacles astonished at the confusion somewhat of a sensitive man, he was unable to go on with his sermon and said down. The old lady thinking he had fainted rushed up to the platform and, pleased to put her fan to such good use, began fanning the bellows into the minister's face.

He had not noticed her before and her sudden appearance with the bellows made him think she was a crazy person. He arose and put out his hands to push her away and in his excitement stumbled off the edge of the platform.

In his fall he caught hold of the old lady carrying a down with him. Men and women rushed to the rescue and were taking the old lady out of the building when the clerk, who had sold the bellows, being present and seeing the result of his joke, hastened forward, explained the circumstances and quieted the people.

The minister did not finish his sermon that day. The old lady gave the bellows to the schoolmaster to be put to its proper use.

Knew the Disease.

One of the primary scholars was sick the other day and the teacher asked the little girl what was the matter. "O I have got a dreadful pain in my heart," was the unexpected reply.

Marriage Monotony.

The teacher had been explaining to the class in etymology the meaning of the word "gamy" as an ending in compounds, and had taken as illustrations the three words "polygamy," "bigamy," and "monogamy." "Polygamy," children, she explained, "is the condition of having several wives; bigamy, the condition of having two wives, and monogamy, that of having only one wife."

After discussing various other roots and words, she reverted to those she had first explained, and put questions to test the knowledge of her pupils.

"Now children," she said, "when a man has many wives, or a woman has many husbands, what do we call it?"

"Polygamy," was the response.

"And what is it when there are two wives or two husbands?"

"Bigamy,"

"Very good. But if the right state of affairs exists, and a man has only one wife and a woman only one husband—what is it then?"

"Monotony."

The New-York Tribune Almanac.

Of course, it is possible to worry through life without keeping a Tribune Almanac at your elbow, but is it worth while—does it pay? For 25 cents a year this publication supplies you with a really marvellous amount of information and the man who has it is an authority in his neighborhood. He doesn't have to be "guessing" or "supposing" about election pluralities, the names of Cabinet Ministers, Senators, Congressmen, Governors or Judges. He doesn't have to rely upon his memory when anything comes up about the big events of the preceding year or in relation to our army or navy, or sporting records, or, in fact, almost anything else of record worth knowing. If you never examined the Tribune Almanac just invest a quarter for once, and see how well pleased you'll be. The 1903 one will be on sale Jan. 1, and may be had from your newsdealer, through your local paper or direct from The Tribune Office, New-York.

Easter of Byron, whose wife was killed May 21, 1902, by the overturning of a carriage, the horse attached to which had been frightened and made unmanageable by a moose crossing the road. The petition asks for $1,000, the price the State put upon the moose that caused the woman's death.

Mr. Libby of Mechanic Falls, petition of B. M. Fernald and 500 others of Poland, Otisfield, Oxford and Casco for winter fishing on Thompson pond in Oxford, Androscoggin and Cumberland.

BARREN COWS

Cows That Will Not Get With Calf.

About one cow in ten is barren. Usually large milkers have this trouble. The common cause is a weakness of the private organs, making the animal either refuse to mate at the regular time, or if she will mate, the desired result will not be obtained. The loss from one barren cow will eat up the profit of at least five paying ones. For this trouble we recommend

Kow-Kure

FOR COWS ONLY

Thousands of barren cows have been made to breed by the use of this great cow medicine.

HADLEY, PA., Dec. 13, 1900.

DAIRY ASSOCIATION:

"Gentlemen:—I have the best one on the farm, which I could not get with calf. I fed one box of Kow-Kure and she caught the first time I drove her."
